2. Cloud Provider Distribution

The following visualization shows how 312 accounts are distributed across cloud providers. AWS is the largest single provider at 25.6%, with a significant portion on non-hyperscaler hosting (28.8%). Combined, non-Google Cloud accounts represent 61.5% of the total - a substantial migration opportunity.

Provider Analysis

AWS (80 accounts / 25.6%): The largest single cloud segment. These organizations have existing cloud maturity on AWS and represent prime migration targets for Google Cloud. Typical stacks include Amazon EC2, Elastic Load Balancing, and CloudFront. Migration messaging should focus on Google Cloud cost efficiency, BigQuery analytics, and Gemini AI.

Other Cloud/Hosting (90 accounts / 28.8%): Accounts on non-hyperscaler hosting (GoDaddy, Rackspace, WP Engine, etc.) represent greenfield cloud adoption opportunities. These organizations may be ready for their first true cloud migration.

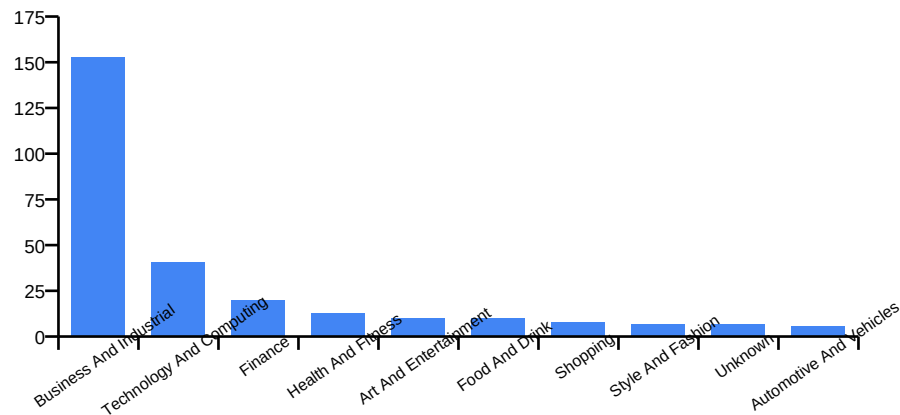

Multi-Cloud (76 accounts / 24.4%): Organizations with workloads spanning multiple cloud providers. Some already include Google Cloud components - these are ripe for consolidation and deeper Google Cloud engagement.

Google Cloud (23 accounts / 7.4%): Already on Google Cloud. These are upsell targets for advanced services: Vertex AI, BigQuery ML, Gemini for Workspace, Cloud Run, and GKE. Focus on expanding consumption and adding AI capabilities.

Microsoft Azure (22 accounts / 7.1%): Direct migration targets. Position Google Cloud's strengths in data analytics, AI/ML, and cost transparency against Azure.

3. Industry Vertical Analysis

Accounts span 18 industry verticals. The dominant vertical is Business And Industrial with 153 accounts (49.0% of total).
